More bingo possible

Bingo laws in Carmel have been tightened up, but one of a series of amendments passed by the City Council will allow as many as 20 new groups to conduct the game. Only two games presently are conducted. Details are on page two.

Fifth trustee named

Clayton B. Neill Jr., no stranger to the Carmel school board, was appointed Tuesday to fill the unexpired term of a trustee who got a job transfer. Neill served two terms on the board before stepping down in 1969. How he won the appointment is part of the story on page three.

Another Marriott snag

A second delay on the environmental impact report on the proposed Marriott Lodge in Carmel Valley happened Tuesday. It was an "unintentional oversight" that project watchdogs outside of county government got short notice of a hearing on the project, a planner said. A new hearing is scheduled in three weeks, according to the report on page three.

Rack crackdown?

News racks have caught the eye of City Hall. The talk is that newspaper distributors soon may be faced with a license fee that could amount to $100 per rack. More details are on page five.

The 99-cent wine

Wine? For 99 cents? Yes and it is good, reports Robert Lawrence Balzer, our wine critic. Read about the savory wines with no snob appeal on page seven.

Only raves from Scott

There are raves for the opera "Madame Butterfly" and the concert given over the weekend by Russian pianist Boris Bloch. Read Scott MacClelland's music column on page eight.

Lift water rationing

End water rationing, a regional water advisory panel has told the Monterey Peninsula Water Management Agency. Water has become plentiful after two years of drought and rationing could be lifted, the Zone 11 Water Advisory Board agreed Monday. Read about the reasons on page 10.

Redoubled traffic patrol

Armed with a state grant and a new squad car with sophisticated radar equipment, the Carmel Police Department started a new project to improve traffic flow and cut injuries from accidents. Flip to page 10 for the story.

Padre cagers breeze

Their defense of the 1977 loop basketball crown is going well. The Padres of Carmel High School have won their first two league games. More sports news also appears on page 21.

Nautical wheeler

Champion yachtsman from Carmel ready to defend 'Merlin' title

CHAMPION SAILOR Harvey V. Kilpatrick, a crewman aboard the 1977 winner of the 2,225-mile TransPac race from Los Angeles to Honolulu, is ready to leave again. The insurance man from Carmel will rejoin many of the crew that sailed the "Merlin" to victory. They will race their chief rival, the "Drifter," to Manzanillo on the Mexican seacoast in two weeks. The story is on page 17 of section two.

Correction noted

Dear Editor:

Contrary to your news item about the six candidates for city offices in the coming election (Pine Cone, Jan. 5), Dorothea Roberts is not the only member of the seven-member Planning Commission who was not appointed by Mayor Gunnar Norberg.

This commissioner was appointed by former Mayor Eugene Hammond during his administration in the early part of 1976.

In the interest of precise reporting and to keep the public record exact, I trust you will note this correction.

Finding fault

Dear Editor:

Except for Carmel attorney Francis Heisler, none of the panelists discussing "no-fault" insurance at the Monterey Peninsula College forum wanted to even talk about the fact that neither the present system nor the particular no-fault system being proposed by insurance companies was properly addressing the real problem — the need for prompt and adequate compensation for all motor vehicle accident victims.

Under the present system, an injured person has a chance for compensation if he or she has personal insurance coverage, or has an airtight court case with witnesses, a friendly jury, the means to hire an attorney or the ability to convince one he can't lose on a contingency basis for a third or a half of the award, somebody to sue who either has liability insurance or enough money to pay an award, and finally, both the patience and the means to survive for several years while awaiting a possible favorable settlement.

The proposed system would have every man, woman and child in California buying a personal injury plan, so that compensation could be obtained from their own insurance companies, making it unnecessary to find someone to blame for accidents, thus the name, "no-fault."

Premiums now paid by vehicle owners for injury liability insurance would instead be paid (as part of vehicle license fees) into a state (or federal) fund that could compensate accident victims promptly and equitably without argument, with the only requirement being that the injury resulted from an accident involving a motor vehicle. Any injury-related litigation would be between the state (or federal) fund administrators and parties responsible (if any) for such accidents, and would not in any way affect compensation awards.

Red Cross

Dear Editor:

On behalf of those sick and injured hospital patients served by the Central California Regional Red Cross Blood Program, I would like to take this opportunity to express appreciation for your community support of the holiday blood drive conducted at the Carmel Holiday Inn on Dec. 2 and 3.

Despite an accident to our mobile unit vehicle en route to Carmel that resulted in a time schedule change, the community responded in a most heartwarming fashion and exceeded their goal by donating 101 units of blood.

Coming at a time just before the three-day Christmas weekend, this "gift of life" was a most welcome expression of giving from the Carmel community.

Turkey story

Dear Editor:

A friend sent me a copy of the Tom Zobel turkey story, which appeared in your Nov. 24 issue.

It was a most interesting article and we always appreciate publicity for our industry, particularly during our holiday season. The small turkey producer is indeed becoming a rarity and stories about them are always refreshing.

For the record, I would like to clear up one inaccuracy in the story. Turkey producers use absolutely no hormones because they are both illegal and ineffective. Turkeys are constantly checked by the F.D.A. and U.S.D.A. for hormones and if any were found the turkeys would be destroyed. You can be sure that no turkey producer would risk their crop for nonexistent profit and that the turkeys that you buy in the stores are never fed hormones of any type.

MUSEUM OFFICIALS in Santa Cruz are trying to locate this painting of the Sherman Rose adobe. It was done in the early 1900s by artist Percy Gray.

Help asked in search for Gray painting

Dear Editor:

I am enclosing a photograph of a watercolor of the Sherman Rose adobe that was painted by Percy Gray, a California landscape artist active in the Monterey area in the early 1900s. The whereabouts of this painting is not known and I would appreciate it if you could run this photo in the Pine Cone. Possibly one of your readers will recognize it and know its location.

The Santa Cruz County Historical Museum and Mr. Gray's grandnephew and biographer, Donald C. Whitton, are organizing an exhibition of the artist's work and we would be delighted if this painting could be located and included. Percy Gray and his wife lived in Monterey following their marriage, and Gray did many paintings of Monterey and its environs.

The museum is located at 118 Cooper St., Santa Cruz 95060. The telephone number is 425-2540.

Bingo amendments ease one restriction, tighten most others

CAUGHT PLAYING bingo after 10 p.m. in Carmel? You could be jailed for six months and fined $500 under a series of amendments to the local bingo law.

The amendments are scheduled to become law on Feb. 9.

Carmel's new bingo ordinance not only restricts the hours of play, it also doubles the annual operator's license fee from $25 to $50.

But one of the amendments will ease the 1976 city restriction that legalized bingo for less than a handful of local organizations.

Under the new ordinance, bingo play will open to fraternal groups, civic leagues and recreation clubs who intend to share their earnings charitably.

TWO ORGANIZATIONS presently have bingo licenses. They are the Carmel Foundation and the Mission San Carlos de Borromeo. As many as 15 to 20 groups, plus all local churches, could obtain licenses because of the more liberal law, Bob Griggs, the city planning director, estimated on Friday.

The ordinance states that all bingo games must be open to the public, not just to members of the sponsoring group.

The City Council voted 3-1 to outlaw bingo in Carmel between the hours of 10 p.m. and 10 a.m. at its meeting on Jan. 3. The councilmen said they did not want bingo games to disturb residents late at night.

Although Mayor Gunnar Norberg requested the strict hours, he voted against the ordinance, "because I don't think we need to legislate on the subject."

Councilman Bernard Anderson was absent and did not vote on the ordinance.

Officials from Monterey and Pacific Grove noted that their cities place no time restrictions on the game.

City Administrator Jack Collins said the ordinance broadens the number, but "controls" those organizations that can play the game.

Bingo licenses can be obtained through the city's Business License Review Board, Collins said.

With few exceptions, the ordinance specifies that all proceeds from bingo games must go to charitable causes.

American Legion Post 512 has conducted "technically illegal" bingo games in the past, according to Carmel Police Chief William Ellis.

The infrequent games were conducted without a license, Ellis said, but the police department allowed the games. Under the new ordinance, the American Legion qualifies for a bingo license.

CARMEL HAS had no bingo "problems," Ellis said, but he noted that in 1976 there was a proliferation of "big time" bingo in Monterey and Seaside.

Outsiders began running bingo games at various service clubs, offering prizes exceeding $1,000, the chief said.

These operations charged up to $3 for a bingo card. "Some guys were losing their shirts," Ellis said.

The Carmel Police Department is charged with monitoring any bingo game that takes place in the city. "But most of our enforcement is based on complaints we receive," Ellis said. Ellis said he expected no problems from Carmel's new bingo law.

Supervisors delay action on Marriott development

THIS WAS not an intentional oversight. It was merely a lack of procedure," Lynn Mounday, the senior county planner, admitted Tuesday as the Board of Supervisors started an abortive review of the proposed Rancho Canada Marriott Lodge.

He was answering several complaints that the important certification hearing on the lodge environmental impact report was put on the supervisors' agenda without giving the public adequate notice.

Without further discussion about the contents of the study, an eight-page addition to the original report, the supervisors reschedule the hearing. The original impact report was declared incomplete by the supervisors on Oct. 4. Moore voted to obtain the added environmental information. Norris did not.

"We must draw the line somewhere and I feel this is where we should draw the line," Moore said, trying to start the hearing. Norris also indicated he wanted the proceeding to begin.

The addition to the impact report analyzed issues related to the water supply, sewage disposal and the economic effects of the multimillion dollar proposed resort. The original report, compiled by the county planning department staff, was released in July 1977.

Report excerpts, p. 24

reset the hearing. It is scheduled for Tuesday, Jan. 31, at 3:30 p.m. in the county courthouse in Salinas.

"I just got the information 30 minutes ago," Mary Ann Matthews, secretary of the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association, told the board. "I feel we need at least a week."

REFERRING to Mounday's remark, Carmel Mayor Gunnar Norberg declared, "It is more than an oversight." He said Carmel city officials only learned of the hearing the day before.

Notice of the hearing was given only in the agenda for the meeting. The agenda was received by the Pine Cone on Saturday.

One of the supervisors, Kenneth Blohm, said he did not receive a copy of the impact report until Tuesday morning.

Supervisors Michel Moore and R. Edwin Norris opposed the delay, but later voted to

THE PRIMARY inadequacy of the EIR — failure to take up cumulative effect — was not addressed. Nothing was done to address the obfuscating generalization of data," Norberg complained in a letter delivered at the hearing.

"No comment is made regarding the absence of discussion of air quality though James Abercrombie of the Monterey Bay Unified Air Pollution Control District states that data is available and that a report on air quality in Carmel Valley was recently finished by Robert Read and air quality was addressed in the Holt Ranch EIR," he said.

The golf and tennis resort would be situated near the mouth of the Carmel River, adjacent to the Rancho Canada golf courses.

If the impact report is certified, the resort developers could seek a use permit to build from the Monterey County Planning Commission.

Cookie call

THE KNOCK at the door this weekend may be that of Carmel Girl Scouts taking orders for their annual cookie sale. The Scouts started the rounds this afternoon. Orders taken now will be delivered starting on Feb. 17. Two Scouts who got an earlier start were Tammi Klaumann and Kathy Irwin. Both girls are nine and members of Carmel Junior Troop 2069. Vacationing councilman loses job as land negotiator

THE CARMEL City Council stalled Monday on obtaining either a temporary or permanent storage site for the city's building and maintenance materials.

The City Council passed up an opportunity to use a site at the end of Martin Road, on the fringe of the city limits, because of complaints from nearby residents that the site would be dirty and foul smelling.

Further consideration for using the city-owned site at Carmel's southeast end, near Mission Trail (formerly Flanders-Doolittle) Park, was passed on for study to the committee on Public Welfare, a council subcommittee. The vote was 3-0. The committee also will study purchase of a city corporation yard.

Councilman Bernard Anderson was absent and did not vote. Councilman David Hughes did not vote, he said, "because it would have passed anyway."

Meanwhile, Anderson, a lame duck councilman on vacation in Africa, was relieved of his duties to negotiate acquisition of a city corporation yard. The duties were assigned to him by the mayor at a City Council meeting on Sept. 6. His council term expires in March and he will not seek reelection.

Anderson is the chairman of the City Council Lands and Improvement Committee, the committee usually assigned to land purchase investigations.

Mayor Gunnar Norberg and Councilmen Mike Brown and Helen Arnold voted for rerouting the corporation site study to the Committee on Public Welfare. Councilman Brown and Arnold comprise that committee, which was appointed by Norberg. They have not scheduled a meeting date.

Norberg explained Tuesday that he shifted the committee responsibility because "we have to adjust to the situation that exists."

He said the city had to "keep the ball rolling" while Anderson was on vacation. Anderson returned Tuesday.

According to Brown, the subcommittee will seek advice from members of the Carmel Sanitary Board on a possible site prior to scheduling a committee meeting.

Brown said the committee will consider lease or purchase of a one-acre tract of land behind the Carmel Mission. The land is owned by the Carmel Sanitary District.

THE CITY also is negotiating for adjoining land owned by Carmel resident Max Hodges.

Some city officials consider the purchase of a corporation yard the key issue facing the city in the next year. It could prove to become a pivotal campaign issue in the March 7 city elections.

The city has had no corporation yard since it was incorporated in 1913. For the past three years, it has

Former trustee Neill named to school board

CLAYTON B. Neill Jr., who served two terms on the Carmel Unified School District board of education before stepping down in 1969, was appointed Tuesday to fill the unexpired term of Trustee Edward T. Reilly Jr. Reilly resigned Jan. 1 because of a job transfer.

Neill, 48, a consulting engineer, was appointed on a unanimous 4-0 vote by the school board. He was one of 15 persons who had applied for the post. The appointment is a provisional one. Trustees must observe a 30-day waiting period before Neill can join the board in an official capacity. A successful petition drive for a special election would force his appointment to be withdrawn.

"If I were appointed," Neill told the trustees at the four-hour interview session Tuesday, "I might come back and rock a few boats."

Neill was one of five finalists selected by the school board. The others were:

• Gail J. Buche, 39, active in school affairs, especially the Early Childhood Education Program at Tularcitos School. She is the president of the Carmel Middle School Parent-Faculty Club.

• Richard A. Krueger, 43, past president of the Carmelo School Parent-Faculty Club and an owner of the Valley Hardware Co. He said his three sons have done better in Carmel district schools than ones elsewhere.

• Dr. Glen Myers, 43, former president of the parents' club at Carmel High School and a professor at the Naval Postgraduate School in Monterey. Myers ran unsuccessfully for the board in 1971. He said, "As parents, we have been slightly disappointed by the middle school. The high school is excellent, but the middle school ages are crucial." He said more discipline and homework were needed at Carmel Middle School.

• Roberta Watson, 39, chairman of the Early Childhood Education program at River School and a member of the Hart Bill Steering Committee.

THE FIELD was narrowed to five after each trustee wrote the names of five contenders on a blank piece of paper. The five most frequently mentioned took seats before the school board and were questioned for 90 minutes.

On a second ballot, three names were solicited from each school board member. The results were announced by Pamela D. Smith, the board president, but she erroneously listed the first, second and third top vote-getters. She mentioned Neill first, Myer second and Mrs. Watson third.

Mrs. Smith quickly corrected herself and said there was agreement that Neill should be appointed as the fifth trustee. Trustee Richard T. Wilsdon offered the motion; it was seconded and passed without dissent.

After the meeting, the trustees explained that Neill's name appeared on all four ballots cast. They declined to say which of the other candidates finished second in the balloting.

NEILL WOULD serve on the board until March 1979, when Reilly's term was scheduled to expire. He is a graduate of Carmel High School and has a master's degree in business administration from Stanford University. He is a director of the Carmel Valley Fire Protection District and the Monterey Marlins Aquatic Club. Neill was the president of the Carmel Rotary Club in 1976. Neill is a principal partner in Neill Engineers, Inc., Carmel and Monterey.

Others who applied for the post and were interviewed Tuesday were:

James C. Anderson, 37, principal of Roger S. Fitch Junior High School at Fort Ord; Clarence E. Dickinson, 65, a retired community college teacher; Noel D. Frodsham, a retired community college teacher; Dr. Al Giordano, 53, a teacher in the business department at Monterey Peninsula College; Carencay Hanel, 38, a former teacher; Dr. Jeffrey Lehr, 35, an allergist; Victor Myers, a textbook writer; Barbara B. Sanford, 52, a businesswoman defeated in a 1975 bid for the school board.

Two applicants did not come for an interview. They were Walter C. Gory Sr., a retired investment banker, and Mildred D. Wollet, a retired teacher.

Storage yard issue

stored building and road repair materials in three city parks — Forest Theater, Forest Hill and Mission Trail.

Storage at all three sites has generated protest from nearby residents.

City Administrator Jack Collins called the Martin Road site "the only remaining available site" for city storage. He said, however, that the site would only be "temporary."

The city administrator failed to push through what is perhaps the most crucial issue he has faced since appointment to his post six months ago.

Collins doggedly attempted to convince the City Council that this was its last chance to obtain a temporary storage facility. "We are frankly at an impasse if this site is not acceptable," Collins warned.

Collins expressed disappointment with the City Council's action. "I think the act of referring the issue to the Committee on Public Welfare is just a way of stopping action on that site altogether," Collins said Tuesday.

THE CITY is still trying to negotiate with Hodges. The city has expressed interest in either buying or leasing part of his property, near the Mission Ranch, but the talks reached a stalemate over an actual selling price. Collins refused to discuss the talks but did say, "I would not want to embarrass Hodges by quoting the price he wants for that property." Hodges declined to comment about the negotiations.

Former Carmel Planning Commissioner Ed Neroda suggested the city should consider condemning the Hodges property for public use.

The city also is considering a temporary storage site on available state land near Highway 1 and Carmel Valley Road. But Collins called the site "obnoxious" because it would be within eyeshot of motorists.

Patricia Connally, a Martin Road resident, presented a petition to the City Council signed by more than 50 residents and nonresidents who objected to the proposed storage site.

She said the storage would be ugly and that the increased traffic would endanger children in the area.

The petition prompted Norberg to call for the annexation of unincorporated areas into the city. For years the mayor has favored annexation.

"It aggravates me to think that people outside the city, who consider themselves Carmelites, are not willing to annex themselves to the city," Norberg said.

Piano medalist to play

Jeffrey Swann, winner of the bronze medal in this year's Van Cliburn International Piano Competition, will perform with the San Jose Youth Symphony at Sunset Center, San Carlos and Ninth, Carmel, Saturday, Jan. 14. The concert begins at 8 p.m.

The program will include Tchaikovsky's Piano Concerto No. 1 in B-flat minor, with Swann as soloist; Debussy's Danses Sacree et Profane; and Toccata and Fugue in D minor by Bach-Stokowski.

Swann, still in his 20s, has performed with many major orchestras in the United States. He won the Dino Ciani International Piano Competition sponsored by La Scala in Milan, Italy. Il Giorno in Milan said of his winning performance in that competition, "Swann is a pianist of acute intelligence, refined poetic style and sensitive touch."

The San Jose Youth Symphony, now in its 25th year, is under the direction of Eugene Stoia.

Thomas exhibit opens

A memorial exhibit of oil paintings by Charles Thomas opened Saturday at the Carmel Art Association Galleries, Dolores between Fifth and Sixth, Carmel.

A Carmel resident for more than 20 years at the time of his death in 1974, Thomas was deeply involved in acting, directing and music as well as painting. He studied fine arts at Phillips University and at the American Academy of Dramatic Art. He appeared in Max Reinhardt's Eternal Robe in New York in 1937 and was a member of the permanent radio casts of March of Time and Cavalcade of America along with Orson Welles and Agnes Moorhead.

City eyes news rack clean-up

By BRUCE HOROVITZ

CARMEL IS on the verge of regulating newspaper sales in the city. It is not the content of the newspapers the city is concerned about, but rather the racks from which they are sold.

One councilman contends that if the city does not start regulating rack locations, Carmel soon could end up with newspaper vending machines from corner to corner.

David Hughes, the councilman, complained to City Administrator Jack Collins that he noticed new newspaper racks sprouting up across the city.

Two of these racks include one in front of the Pernille restaurant, San Carlos and Sixth, which is chained to a tree, and another near the post office entrance, Fifth and Dolores.

Carmel Postmaster Frank Ledesma says the rack presents a potential safety hazard to patrons who might trip over it. The city is liable for such hazards in the public right of way, according to Collins.

Both racks have been removed since complaints were lodged with city officials late in December.

The city has a law regulating newspaper stands, but it has never been enforced, Collins said. The law could require a license fee up to $100 per rack.

CARMEL IS going to run into some legal difficulties regarding the freedom of the press," contends a distributor of the Monterey Peninsula Herald.

Bob Garrison, the distributor, says he probably would move his rack before paying a license fee.

Carmel's only Herald vending rack is located near the Broken Egg, Mission and Sixth. The rack sells about 10 papers daily, Garrison says.

Herald newspaper racks in Pacific Grove, Monterey, Seaside and Salinas face no such regulations, Garrison says.

Steve Canepa, distributor of the San Francisco Chronicle and the Wall Street Journal in Carmel and Pebble Beach, said he had never heard of a city placing restrictions on newspaper racks. "I don't know of any other cities that regulate racks," he told the Business License Review Board at its Jan. 5 meeting.

Perhaps newspaper vending racks on any public property in Carmel are illegal, suggests City Planning Director Bob Griggs.

The city's zoning code specifies "all businesses must be conducted in a closed structure," noted Griggs. The planning director is uncertain how newspaper racks can disregard the city code.

The racks are allowed on private property, Griggs says, "but I don't believe public property should be used for private enterprise," he explained.

CARMEL'S NEWSPAPER rack regulations date back to 1969, when racks were subject to Planning Commission approval, Griggs said.

All the racks in the city were reviewed and granted a single joint permit. But they were subject to annual review.

The racks have not been reviewed since 1969, so their use permit has become null and void, notes Griggs.

A condition prohibiting signs on all newspaper racks in Carmel makes most of the existing racks in violation of city code, Griggs adds.

How to apply for a newspaper rack permit?

First, file a use permit application with the Board of Adjustments. Next, apply for a vending machine license through the City Hall.

The license fee requires a $100 deposit. The annual fee requirement is set at $100 per machine, or 15 per cent of the machine's annual gross profits, according to Karen Love, a clerk in the city's Finance Department.

The city attorney has proposed that all newspaper coin racks become subject exclusively to Business License Review Board control. That could require an ordinance change because the controlling body currently is the Board of Adjustments, says City Attorney George Pictured here is our remarkable new machine making continuous rain gutters on a job in Pebble Beach. It's the only machine of its kind on the entire Monterey Peninsula.

This amazing equipment can roll out seamless strips of gutter any length up to 980 feet! No seams mean better appearance, better draining, easier cleaning, no joint leakage.

What's more, the material is long-lasting aluminum which will not rust, with a fine protective coating of bonderized paint (like an enamel, applied under high pressure) both inside and out.

Expensive? Not at all! The cost for this extraordinary rain gutter is comparable to ordinary types of galvanized metal gutters which rust out in very few years.

So give us a call. Our skilled craftsmen will quickly and expertly produce and install this great new gutter right on the job for you. Remember . . . it's aluminum and will not rust.

Watercolors on display at Evans Gallery

Acrylic and casein watercolors by members of the National Society of Painters in Casein and Acrylic will be displayed at the Marjory Evans Gallery in Sunset Center, San Carlos and Ninth, Carmel, until Jan. 22.

Casein, derived from curdled milk, was used as a waterproof glue for hundreds of years before artists began to use it as a colorless and permanent binder for pigments.

The national society was founded in 1952 to give artists the opportunity to exhibit their works in the varied techniques possible in the new medium.

Gallery hours are 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. weekdays and one hour before any event at Sunset Center. For more information, phone 624-3996.

Wine Connoisseur:

Those new and savory wines that sell for, tsk tsk, 99 cents

By ROBERT LAWRENCE BALZER

THERE ARE artists, and there are scientists. When the two are combined in one person who also has the seasoning of years — and the subject is wine — he is a man to seek for guidance. We have in mind, of course, the contemporary dean of the world's enologists and winemakers, Andre Tchelistcheff, who celebrated his 76th birthday in Monterey last month during his attendance at the California Wine Festival, for which he was one of the principal speakers. It has been our privilege to learn from this dynamic Slavic poet of the grape for almost 40 years, from the beginnings of his work for Georges de Latour of Beaulieu Vineyards of Rutherford.

"The new American wine industry," he told his listeners, "is obtaining in a few years what Europe has taken thousands of years to accomplish." Professor A. Dinsmoor Webb, of UC Davis, in the opening seminar address, had cited present advances of wine technology as almost ultramodern; it was only decades ago, in the time of Pasteur, that fermentation was a scientific mystery. "There is only one difference now," Tchelistcheff declared; "we know what is going on. There is a combination of science and freedom of artistic composition. Through the tremendous efforts of (Professors) Amerine and Winkler, we evolved from the smear of Prohibition, to arrive in the bonanza of this new Golden Age of Wine. The new vinicultural systems developed here are the ABCs of the modern wine industry."

He concluded with a reminder to the winemakers in his audience, "We need an average beverage for daily diet — the regular glass of wine that is boon companion." He cited, as examples, the Gallo French Colombard and Sauvignon Blanc, both inexpensive, cork-finished varietal wines of brilliance and obvious finesse yet within easily affordable price range ($1.69).

FINDING THAT "regular glass of wine" is a common search which unites wine lovers by the thousands. We can accept it as quite substantial truth that many of our inexpensive California jug wines are more stable, more brilliant and finer wines than the legendary "vin ordinaire" or country wine of European provinces. But there's still the job of matching palate and purse, to find in our own common marketplace the uncommon wine which pleases our particular palate. There are many good examples, and are bound to be more and more as thousands of recently planted acres come into bearing and today's young vineyards show added richness with their added years.

Sometimes a price like 99 cents for a decanter-carafe of Cabernet Sauvignon seems suspiciously cheap. Could the wine be any good at that price? Three young men, John, Fred and Joe Franzia, third-generation spinoffs from the pioneer Giuseppe Franzia Italian immigrant family settled in the San Joaquin Valley, are now into their own winery in Ceres. A modern million-gallon facility, just south of Modesto, is devoted to blending, aging and packaging surplus inventories of primary winemaking facilities. From shrewd buying, these "brothers and cousins," under the acronym "Bronco" Wine Co., have released some of the best buys in the market under their JFJ Winery label. There have been some anonymous North Coast wines at 99 cents. The present 750 ml (25.4-ounce decanter) bottling series — which includes Cabernet Sauvignon, Chenin Blanc and French Colombard — has highly respectable origins, but it is John Franzia's blending skills which are giving the wines the taste-edge that makes them so immediately acceptable.

So the Cabernet Sauvignon is not Napa-rich! It has just a little bit of Central Valley Ruby Cabernet in it, giving it a fresh zing. John is particularly proud of his French Colombard, sweet-edged, but silky. With a dozen bottles, you've got a dozen carafes for next summer's picnic tables! And there have been all those boon-companion regular glasses of wine for the 99 cents song!

JUST A LITTLE more costly, and taking the market by storm for just the same reason, are three wines from the Robert Mondavi Winery of Oakville at $2.19 per bottle and $3.89 per magnum. Take your choice of Red Table Wine, reflecting a blend of Zinfandel, Cabernet Sauvignon, Gamay, Carignane, Mondeuse and Pinot Noir, or White Table Wine, predominantly Chenin Blanc and French Colombard, but dry and crisp, or Rose Table Wine, almost entirely Grenache, with just the least perceptible sweetness. All wonderful patchwork wines, from magnificent remnants put together with artistry. The tag-line on each label tells it true: "A wine for everyday use made entirely of varietal wine grapes. Flavorful and complex in character." They answer the Tchelistcheff challenge, too.

The Music Corner

'Butterfly,' Bloch twin triumphs

By SCOTT MacCLELLAND

THERE IS a phoenix-like quality at Hidden Valley. Despite tremendous amounts of creative energy going full tilt, a behind-the-scenes glimpse last season revealed a lot of frustration, disappointment, exhaustion, intrigue and money worries. But like the phoenix, Hidden Valley has auspiciously burst onto the scene with an unbelievable production of Puccini's Madame Butterfly.

Lots of new faces are to be found in Hidden Valley's new season. Many of those are members of perhaps Hidden Valley's best opera orchestra ever. The orchestra was certainly one of the best things going Sunday afternoon at Hidden Valley Theater. (I learned, after the fact, that at the climax of act two all of the music stand lights suddenly went out — and stayed out — for about two minutes. But in the audience, you couldn't tell. The music played on without a hitch.)

The Seattle Opera presence was more widespread than I had originally thought. Altogether there are Henry Holt, overall musical advisor; conductor James Douglas Tuggle; stage director Lincoln Clark; and the Seattle Opera costumes for Madame Butterfly.

In the title role, Rebecca Cook dominated her colleagues on stage, both as actress and singer. She did not seem like the 15-year-old Cio Cio San of the story, but the role is a big one and Miss Cook gave a splendid performance. Unlike the other singers, she displayed vocal resources that would flood a full-sized opera house.

Diane Elias was a marvelously sympathetic Suzuki. Not only a lovely singer, but an actress acutely sensitive to Suzuki's relationship to Butterfly. In the act two duet, the voices of the two women blended into one of the performance's most beautiful moments.

William Eichorn was Pinkerton. His deportment on stage clearly reflected his substantial experience. He was a fine actor, though more convincing in act one than in act three. He has a very attractive voice that suffers a little pinching at the top. If he is possessed of a big sound, he held it in reserve.

Baritone Richard Haile was Sharpless. He has another very attractive voice, but not a big sound. Haile has a manner that is very likeable and sympatico, but the role of Sharpless is one of strong, conflicting emotions that imply a characterization of much greater subtlety and depth than was brought to it by Haile. Sharpless is a deeper character than Pinkerton and presents a much greater challenge.

TENOR JOHN GRUETT created an excellent character for the marriage broker, Goro. He held steady to the character and was convincingly fussy, bossy and, in turn, obsequious. And there is more to his voice than this caricature part requires. Dario Fraticelli also presented a fine portrayal of the rich suitor Yamadori. As the Bonze, Reg Huston came on like gangbusters. His denunciation of Butterfly in act one was totally and psychically violent.

Henry Hill's set was ideal. It was completely serviceable, was very attractive from nearly any direction, and made marvelous use of the theater, stealing the most acting space out of the building's confines. The only part of it that was not so successful was the plastic scrim that represented the sky and the view of the harbor. It worked fine, through the use of colored lights, to display the changes of day, but the bamboo triangle (a representation of a mountain in the distance) did more to spoil the illusion of sky and distance than to serve any symbolic function. For that matter, it looks as much like a neighbor's roof as it does a mountain. Perhaps a second scrim and some vague outline of distant hills would help.

Lincoln Clark's stage direction, for the most part, took full advantage of Hill's set. It, too, spread into the full space available. I occasionally wished that the treatment was a little more comprehensively satisfying for theater in the round. The action tended to stack up in one direction or another, rather than in a way that would best serve both sections of the divided audience. At the finale, Clark has Butterfly stab herself, and die, on stage but without the reappearance of either the child or Pinkerton. The last sight is of the dead Butterfly in a lighted spot on the darkened stage.

Conductor Tuggle provided sure, accurate leadership that was singer-oriented. Perhaps as the production settles in a little more, he will be able to loosen it up a bit. But he must be very pleased with the orchestra. It is really fine.

Butterfly will be performed on a changing schedule through Feb. 11. Reservations can be obtained by calling 659-3115.

Pianist's 'Blochbuster'

IN A WORD, the final Monterey Peninsula College Festival of Piano Music concert was a Blochbuster. Sunday night, the 26-year-old pianist Boris Bloch charmed and dazzled an exhilarated audience in the college theater.

This Odessa-born virtuoso, of medium height and slender build, is an irrepressible musical personality. He enjoys performing before an audience both at the keyboard and at the footlights where he chats, in near perfect English and without inhibition, with his delighted listeners. He has an irresistible boyish grin that reminds me of Alfalfa, of television's Li'l Rascals show, and an equally compelling serious side. Of the entire festival, Bloch's concert was the most successful.

Bloch's program opened with Beethoven's 32 Variations on an Original Theme in C minor. This piece is a veritable kaleidoscope of colors and effects and Bloch took advantage of every opportunity to display impeccable virtuosity, beautiful musicianship and a personal style that reminded me of both Glenn Gould and Andre Watts. He made this opener a tour de force and the performance was thrilling.

Incredible technique and potent musical personality

Bloch then explained the program's next piece, Hyperbole, by contemporary Israeli composer Shulamit Ran. The work was commissioned by the Rubinstein Piano Competition and was composed in 1976. Bloch later expressed his pleasure at the positive audience response to this modern, many-faceted work. In part, the work resembled the melodic fragments and the harmonies of Olivier Messiaen.

Two Chopin works, the Ballade in F minor, OP. 52, and the Polonaise in A flat, Op. 53, continued the program. In these, Bloch played rather straight readings that did not plumb the potential depths of them. He rather opted for beautiful playing and revealed seamless legato fingerwork and great sensitivity to balanced voicing. With more years, he will no doubt explore in greater depths the uncanny subtleties of Chopin. One thing I missed in these works was the kind of dynamic shading that was a feature of the Beethoven.

FOLLOWING INTERMISSION, Bloch appeared in a more serious mood as he displayed four Rachmaninoff preludes. These works do not strike me as having the same depth as much of Chopin, but they are finely wrought and are harmonically and dramatically very rich. Again we witnessed Bloch's incredible technique and, more than that, his potent musical personality.

The program's last listed work was the demanding Prokofiev Sonata No. 7 in B flat, Op. 83. The piece is serious, largely intellectual, and musically economical. The virtuosity of the performance alone was awesome. The artist's conception was a little young, I think for the peculiar demands of this piece. Its finale is humorful in the way Shostakovich is often humorful. Again the audience gave noisy expression to its excitement and satisfaction.

Bloch played three encores. The first was Prokofiev's Suggestions diaboliques, another pianistic dazzler and another show stopper. The second was Chopin's famous Etude in F, the one that sings and dances to a finale of an unexpected and barely whispered progression of four broken chords. It is a great crowd pleaser and everyone agreed.

Lastly, Bloch wondered if we would enjoy a Viennese waltz and then leaped into Gruenfeld's Soirees de Vienne, a virtuosic and superficial pastiche on the Fledermaus and other waltzes.

Congratulations to Heinz Hubler and MPC for securing Boris Bloch, a young musical personality and piano master of international dimensions.

Carmel crewman Harvey Kilpatrick rejoins 'Merlin' for Mexico race

By JIM BARRETT

A ROAR ROSE from the 5,000 spectators who had lined the harbor. All eyes were riveted to the 67-foot sailboat called the Merlin. It had just passed the buoys at Diamond Head, ending its 2,225-mile journey from Los Angeles and making sport sailing history. It had cut 22 hours off the world record, finishing in eight and a half days.

"I don't think any of us knew what we did for two or three days after that," said Harvey V. Kilpatrick, one of the eight crewmen, an insurance agent from Carmel.

"None of us drank. We were so blown away, we didn't need booze," he declared, flipping through a scrapbook filled with clippings about the record-setting journey that won the July 1977 TransPac Race. The race is the West Coast version of the Americas Cup.

The locals were gifted with excellent sailing conditions. A large high-pressure zone in the Pacific Ocean, known as the "Pacific High," moved north and allowed the Merlin to take the most direct route to Hawaii.

Although the Pacific High means clear skies and flat seas to commercial shippers, all it means to yachtsmen is no wind. wind.

Strong winds swirl around the contours of the high and as it moves, surrounding wind channels are compressed and kick up even more wind. With that kind of luck going, Merlin cut a virtually straight course to Diamond Head harbor.

Had conditions been different, it most likely would have taken the more reliable but longer wind route — sail southwest, then northwest, thus skirting the Pacific High.

The victory gave special satisfaction to its crew, all of whom live around Monterey Bay. "We wanted to beat the big guys and we wanted local people from Monterey Bay to do it," Kilpatrick, 37, explained the other day as he sat in the Monterey Yacht Club looking out on the harbor.

"Winning," he added with an impish grin, "it was part of giving them the big finger."

RAISED IN PEBBLE Beach, Kilpatrick has been a nautical wheeler since he was 11 and started sailing out of Stillwater Cove. He has a cherubic face and cheeks rosy-red as if they had been slapped repeatedly by strong Pacific winds. He is a bachelor who savors his time at sea. Last year, he was away sailing for seven weeks. "Don't put that in the paper," he said.

The quest for speed is never ending among yachtsmen, according to Kilpatrick. "This is a sickness. A disease. You just keep trying to go faster and faster," he said.

Reason enough for the Merlin to be San Diego-bound in two weeks for the start of the 1,100-mile Baja Race. Why? Because the No. 2 finisher in the TransPac, the equally swift Drifter, is among the field of 41 boats.

On the ninth day out of Los Angeles, as morning dawned over the Pacific, the 69-foot Drifter was a mere 17 minutes behind the Merlin. As the day brightened and Diamond Head neared, however, the Merlin gained speed and moved from the slim half-mile lead to one of three miles at the finish buoys. "It was close," Kilpatrick remarked.

So the macho appeal of remaining No. 1 coupled with the lure of tranquil Manzanillo, the tiny seaport town in Mexico where the race concludes, has pulled Kilpatrick and most of the TransPac crew back to the boat. It is owned by Bill Lee, of Soquel, who also designed and built the ultra-lightweight craft. A second Carmel salt, Dick Clark, a realty agent, also is on the Baja crew.

Sport sailing is the second most grueling physical activity, Kilpatrick quotes a physical fitness expert as saying.

"In the TransPac," he said, "we each spent three hours at the helm, five off, but we all had other jobs to do, too. I was the medic. When you are racing, you seldom get more than four hours of sleep at night."

The sailing cult, however, takes the edge off the fatigue by racing to places like Hawaii, or, in a few weeks, the Las Hadas resort in Manzanillo. The palatial hotel, built by a Bolivian tin millionaire, as about as posh as resorts come. In defeat, the Merlin crew can find comfort in the warm crystal-clear water, a lavish margarita and bay views from the hilltop hotel rooms. "But it all will be better if we are winners," quipped Kilpatrick.

A SPORT SAILING veteran, Kilpatrick has been on crews in the Buenos Aires-to-Rio de Janeiro races and ones from Newport, R. I., to Bermuda and the Caribbean circuits that start in Florida.

"It's a way of getting away from the world. No one can bother you. You can't do a darn thing in the world except sail," he said. "Plus, almost anywhere I go in the world, I can meet people. Sailors are immediate friends.

"Nobody will help you park your car, but they will help

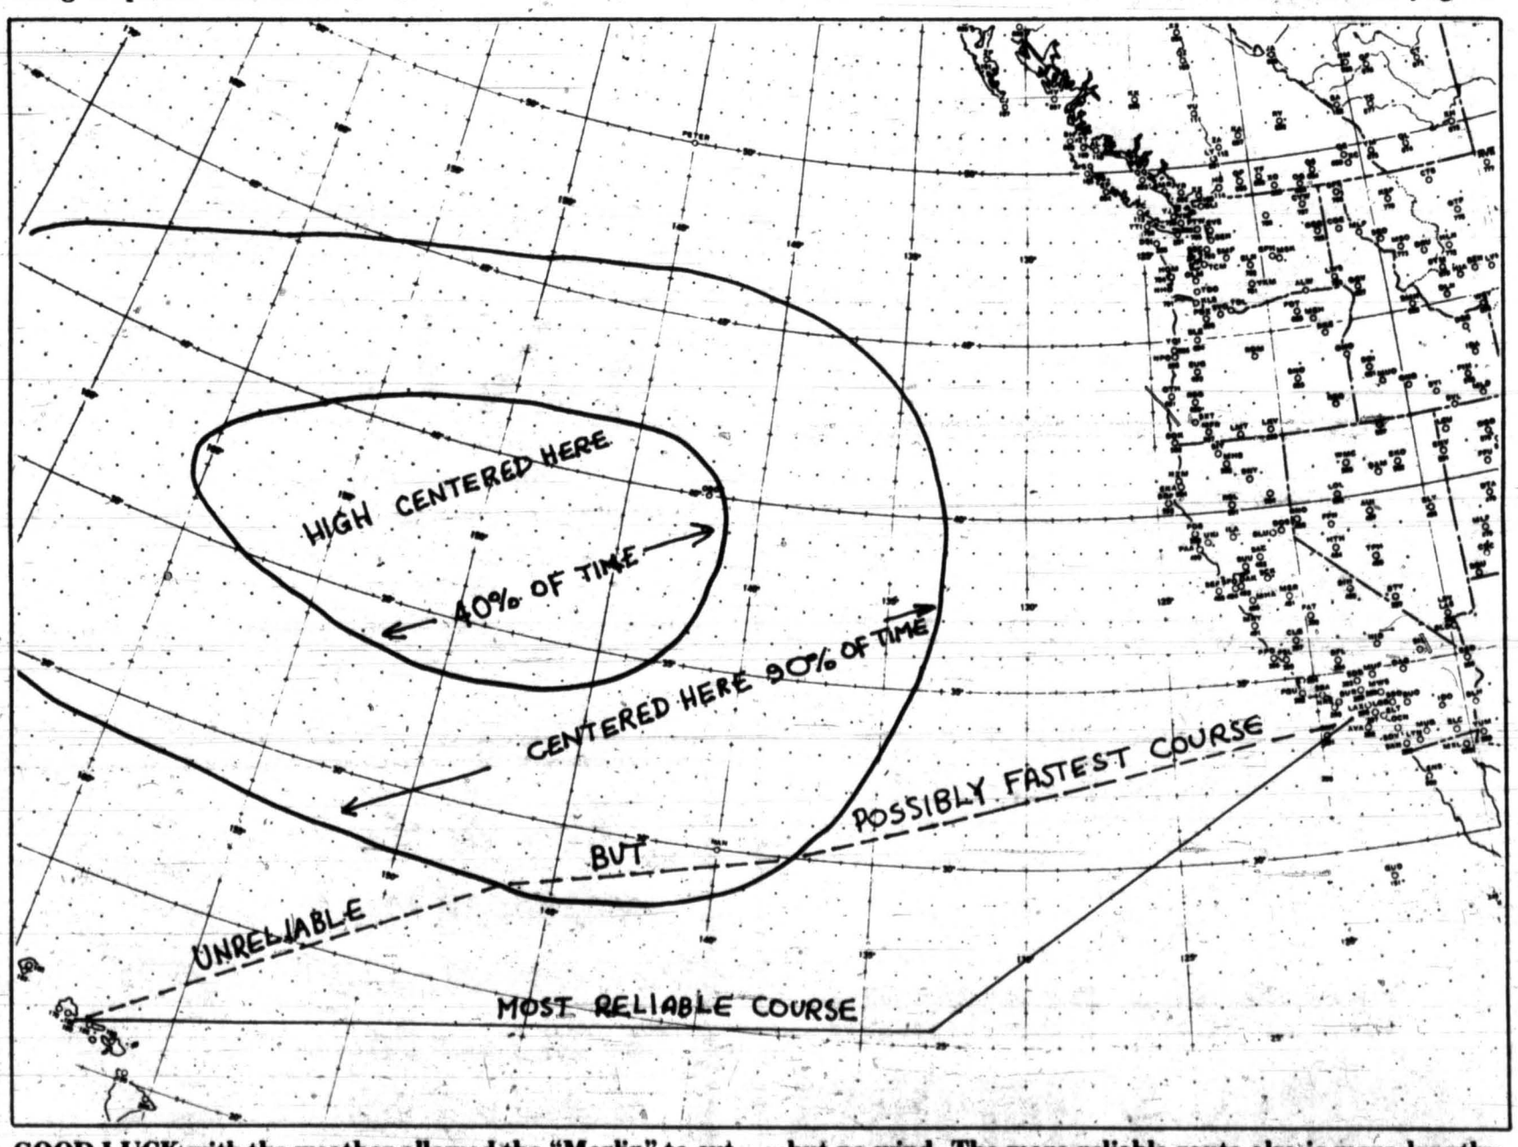
SAILS BILLOWING in a strong wind, the "Merlin" cruises the waters of San Francisco Bay. Harvey V. Kilpatrick, one of its crewmen, organizes these so-called "training" sessions. He picks times of the year when the weather and seas are "heavy." The 67-foot sailboat won the 1977 TransPac Race across the Pacific to Honolulu.

OUTSIDE HIS office at the Monterey harbor, Harvey V. Kilpatrick, champion yachtsman from Carmel, flips through weather charts drawn for the upcoming race to Manzanillo, Mex. The 37-year-old bachelor was a crewman on the sailboat that won the 1977 TransPac race from Los Angeles to Honolulu. (George T. C. Smith photo)



GOOD LUCK with the weather allowed the "Merlin" to cut the most direct route to Hawaii. This map was prepared before the crew cast off from Los Angeles in July. The heart of the weather system is the "Pacific High," a prevailing high-pressure zone noted in the center of the chart. For sailors, it means smooth seas and clear skies, but no wind. The more reliable route also is more lengthy. The "Merlin" found its way between the bands of pressure systems; they compressed, creating a channel of strong wind, and the crew joyously sailed to victory in the 1977 TransPac race.

15 make RLS dean's list

Three students from Carmel received straight As during the first academic term at Robert Louis Stevenson School in Pebble Beach. The trio — freshman Richard Foote and sophomores Emeric McDonald and Cheryl Sailer — was among 15 local students on the dean's honor roll.

Each student maintained a minimum 3.5 grade-point average. They were Christina Aiello, John Corbett, Carol Cunningham, Kathy Erskine, Jenny Hogan, Lisa Lockwood and Michele Ramsey.

Others were Rebecca Paravicini, Carol Nickbarg, John Ferriter, Dan McDonald and Lyn Stephson.

PARTY PLANS

By PHYLLIS JERVEY

The talented wife of Rear Admiral Marshall Dornin, former superintendent of the Naval Postgraduate School in Monterey, asked me to visit with her in their on-yard quarters. Nova, as only intimates call her, has published a charming little booklet called Better Is a Dinner of Herbs Where Love Is.

To quote Mrs. Dornin, whose many followers lived and retired in Carmel, "Now that our twin daughters Marcia and Margot are married, they have asked for recipes they remember from childhood. 'Why not make a booklet of our favorite dishes?' they asked. The motive was obviously not a selfless one, but I agreed. For the title I was reminded of the proverb I often quoted when the girls asked why stew instead of steak, or custard instead of creme brulee. My answer was, 'Better is a dinner of herbs where love is than a stalled ox with hatred therewith.' And why not? The preparation of food for family and friends is indeed a labor of love, or should be."

Mushroom Canapes

Cut link sausages into half-inch slices. Brown these in their own drippings until well done. Remove stems from 1-inch or larger mushrooms. Fill caps with sausages. Place mushrooms in a warm oven until heated through.

Crabmeat Salad

This salad is filling yet low in calories. Combine part finely diced crisp celery hearts with fresh crabmeat (or two cans best crabmeat); add low-calorie mayonnaise, yogurt, salt and pepper, paprika and chopped chives. The herbs you have grown yourself will spark this easy salad. Some capers perhaps?

Cafe Brulot

If the occasion is festive this will add glamor. Put very thin orange and lemon rind slices in a chafing dish with some whole allspice and a stick of cinnamon. Add three lumps of sugar soaked in brandy. Heat some extra brandy in a ladle, then light it with expertise. When those sugar lumps dissolve, add very strong coffee mixed with chicory. Serve in heated demitasses. While creating this ceremony with great flourish to be careful not to lean over the brandy while it is burning. It might singe off your eyebrows.

Of course, instead of the cold salad, you would prefer a hot dish during our current stormy weather:

Crabmeat au Gratin

Melt 4 tablespoons butter; add 3 tablespoons flour to make a smooth roux. Add 2 cups half-and-half until sauce is smooth and thickened. Add 1 cup freshly grated Parmesan cheese plus 1 pound fresh crabmeat. If you prefer making the sauce the day before, turn the cold sauce and crabmeat into a casserole and bake in a moderate oven.

Black rolls 5-1. How should he play?

ANSWER TO BACKGAMMON PROBLEM

Black is far ahead in the race. The "automatic" move is bring home the two men from Black's outer board, so that Black can start bearing off with his next roll.

That would certainly be the right move if White did not have a man on the bar. Black would have nothing to fear and he could go about his business without a care in the world. But with a man on the bar, Black's concern must be with safety, for White has a formidable board. If Black leaves a blot in bearing off and gets hit, he could easily lose the game.

If Black brings both men home from his outer board, he would leave a shot at his next turn were he to roll 6-6, 5-5, 6-5, 6-4 or 6-3. And even if he avoided leaving a shot at his next turn, his hazards would increase with subsequent rolls.

Can Black do anything about it? Yes. He can break his 6-point, playing the men to his 5- and 1-points. Now, the only number that would leave a shot at Black's next turn would be 6-1. Assuming that White does not come in, Black would then play the 6 to his 1-point and the man from his 2-point to his 1-point for the 1. To hit the Black blot, White would have to roll specifically 6-1 at his next turn, and that is 17 to 1 against. And that will probably be the only chance White will get.

Ex-Army attache to address retirees

Col. Samuel L. Stapleton, commandant of the Defense Language Institute (DLI), will be the guest speaker at the Thursday, Jan. 19, meeting of Monterey Peninsula Branch of Sons-In-Retirement at Rancho Canada Golf Club.

Col. Stapleton, a 1946 graduate of the U.S. Military Academy, served in both the Korean and Vietnam conflicts as an artillery officer. During an assignment in Spain, he earned his master's degree in languages at the University of Madrid in 1959 and later headed the Spanish department at West Point. He also served in the Pentagon as an assistant to the Deputy Secretary of the Army for International Affairs. Col. Stapleton was military attache in Buenos Aires for two tours of duty before being appointed commandant of the DLI in August 1975.

His topic for the speech will be "Terrorism in Argentina."

Newly elected officers and directors, headed by "Big Sir" W. Lyle Wallace, will conduct their organization meeting at 10 a.m., followed by the happy hour at 11 a.m., and the luncheon and program at noon in the banquet room.

A TIMELY WARNING TO CARMELITES

We feel it is a duty today to speak a few crisp words of advice and warning to readers of the Pine Cone.

Today you should refrain from speeding on Ocean Avenue, keep away from houses where games of chance are indulged in and abstain from drinking.

Today you are advised to stay out of the rain and avoid swimming, mountain climbing, balloon ascensions and getting married.

Today is Friday the 13th.

AIRPLANE SEEKS LANDING FIELD IN VALLEY

About 200 acres of land, known as Stewart Field, part of which has been used as an airplane landing field by Norman Miller, commercial aviator, has been rented indefinitely to William Machado.

Machado intends to cultivate 50 or 60 acres of this land to grain and Miller's landing field will be turned over by the plow next week.

BOHEMIAN DINNER OF CARMEL ARTISTS

So far as we can make out, or as anyone can, anything that is Bohemian is informal, gay, spontaneous and something where the actors are the audience and the audience are the actors.

In other words, everyone plays. The arts association is going to have a Bohemian dinner next week. Don't think of missing it. An order has been issued by the dinner's committee: bring your own stein.

CARMEL SCHOOLS HIT JACKPOT

A test compiled by Life Magazine given at Carmel High School Wednesday night placed three Carmel schools in a top national bracket.

The three schools are Carmel High School, Woods School and Sunset School. The test and survey also showed that Carmel teachers' salaries are considerably higher than the national average.

SURVEY RESULTS ARE SURPRISING

At least 60 per cent of the high school's parents are members of the PTA.

The minimum starting salary for teachers is at least $2,700 per year.

The chief administrative office in each school is free from teaching duties.

There is a psychologist or psychiatrist available for consultation at each school.

All the schools have flush toilets.

NEW CITY ADMINISTRATOR POWERS

Dr. Melvin Steckler, special consultant to the city, told the City Council to enlarge the position of city administrator.

The city administrator should be relieved of his many city clerk duties so that he can work more closely with department heads, Steckler said.

As Steckler explained, the city administrator would have no authority, but would have expanded responsibility.

OLD POLICE STATION PROPERTY MAY BE SOLD

After a year and a half, the city finally has a suitable buyer for the old police station property, but if the City Council waits too long, Mr. Henry Jackson may withdraw his offer.

The City Council will vote on the matter at its February meeting.

Originator of Anzel's to re-open cafe

The originator of Anzel's Cafe, Anzel Metaxas, has purchased the small restaurant after a four-year hiatus from the food business.

Regarded as one of Carmel's landmark eating spots, the restaurant was first opened by Mrs. Metaxas in 1959. Mrs. Metaxas sold it to Jacqueline Goodwin in 1974, from whom she re-acquired the restaurant.

Cost-cutting congressman

Panetta reports saving $35,000 in Hill expenses

REP. LEON E. Panetta (D-Monterey) has returned $35,000 in salary and office savings to the U.S. Treasury, his aide, Steve Page, said last week. Panetta represents Carmel and Carmel Valley, where he lives.

Sending back his own pay raise, which totaled $4,257 for a nine-month period in 1977, Panetta also finished the year with about $5,000 remaining in his allowances for travel, office supplies and other expenses. Panetta also saved $25,000 from his allowance for staff salaries, Page said.

The savings are automatically returned to the Treasury Department, he added.

"I believe that belt tightening begins at home," Panetta said. "While these sums may not seem large in comparison to the overall federal budget, they are an example of the kind of savings that can be achieved through careful spending and oversight at every level of government."

Last year, the freshman legislator paid for his own meals and lodging. Travel bills charged to the government were limited to trips between Washington, D.C., and Panetta's district, with the exception of one trip to Minnesota and Iowa as a member of the House Agriculture Committee for field hearings on family farms, said Page.

Panetta made 31 round trips to his district to meet with constituents. He flew coach instead of first class, the aide said.

Panetta also had a 96 per cent attendance record for votes in Congress, according to Page.

"THE MOST important thing," Panetta said, "is that in achieving these savings, I was still able to expand congressional services to the 16th District. My field offices have handled a case load of almost 2,000 individuals and families with problems relating to the federal government, and my Washington office has responded to an average of 400 letters a week on various legislative issues."

Although congressmen were allowed over $14,000 in 1977 for office space rental in home districts, Panetta was able to locate field offices in Monterey, Salinas, Hollister, Santa Cruz and San Luis Obispo for a total of $11,150 per year, largely through the cooperation of local governments.

Panetta could have spent $63,651 on travel between Capitol Hill and his district, his office said, and up to $259,641 for support staff.

PANETTA'S figures showed that he saved almost 10 per cent of these amounts while returning his $473-a-month pay raise, passed for all congressmen in March 1977. Panetta currently has 16 staff assistants, nine in Washington and seven in his district.

"If we could get all federal officials and representatives to save 5 to 10 per cent of their respective budgets," Panetta said, "this would have a significant impact not only on spending and the economy, but more importantly, on restoring public trust in a government that is efficiently and effectively delivering services to the people."

Two down in Padre quest for loop crown

By JAY POSNER

AFTER OPENING the defense of their Mission Trail Athletic League title by defeating Hollister 65-51 Friday, the Carmel High Padres got a scare Saturday night from the Salinas Cowboys. But Dave Stevenson's shot off a missed Padre jumper with six seconds left gave Carmel a slim 38-36 victory.

The Padres were playing without two starters. Forward John Frincke had the flu and center Will Wilkinson was sidelined with a turned ankle. They trailed throughout the first three quarters. Carmel made only two of 13 field-goal attempts in the first quarter and the Padre game total was only 14-45 for 31.1 per cent.

Carmel trailed 24-17 at halftime and 31-28 after three quarters before Stevenson's offensive rebound basket with 5:31 left gave Carmel their first lead of the night, 32-31. Salinas came right back on a Greg Heidel basket to take the lead, but Tom Frincke put into two free throws with 5:10 left to give the Padres a 34-33 lead. However, Salinas never quit and a jumper by Greg McCready with 3:50 remaining gave the Cowboys their last lead of the night, 35-34.

Twenty-five seconds later, John Lucido's jump shot put the Padres ahead 36-35. Salinas' Jim Laughton tied the game with a free throw at the 2:46 mark. Sixteen seconds later, the Cowboys rebounded a missed Padre shot and tried to stall for a final shot. But Salinas turned the ball over as Stevenson scooped up a loose ball with 1:28 left. Carmel stalled for the next 1:12 then called time out with 16 seconds remaining. With nine seconds to go, Frincke's jumpshot missed, but Stevenson picked up the rebound and put it in for the winner with six seconds remaining. Salinas tried to call time but with two seconds to go, Barry Jackson was called for traveling and the Padres regained the ball.

Stevenson led Carmel with 15 points and Frincke popped in 12. Frincke led the Padres with 10 rebounds while center Jim Irwin pulled in seven as did Stevenson. Greg Heidel led Salinas with 14 points.

THE JUNIOR varsity game was just as exciting with the Cowboys winning 47-46 as Danny Deaver made two free throws with 13 seconds remaining. Deaver dropped 18 points to lead Salinas in scoring. Carmel was led by Adam Sherburne, who scored 16 points, and Art Strum, who tossed in 13. Salinas also won the freshman contest 50-25. Grey Raynes led Carmel with 12 points.

At Hollister Friday night, the Padres opened up a 19-14 first quarter lead and a 41-24 halftime edge before coasting in to a 65-51 victory. Carmel made 25-57 field goal attempts (43.9 per cent) although the Padres hit only three of 12 in the third quarter. Tom Frincke had 16 points and nine rebounds and brother John had 14 points and 13 rebounds. Ed Cecena led Hollister with 23 points.

Hollister won both early games, 43-33 in the JV contest, and 53-18 in the freshman game. Adam Sherburne and Art Strum led the JV's with 13 and 12 points, respectively. David Nottenkamper topped the Carmel freshmen with nine points.

The Padres host Gonzales High School tomorrow night. The Gonzales varsity has a 4-9 won-lost record in play this season.

Bob Hope, Jimmy Demaret to join players in pre-Crosby exhibition match

Comedian Bob Hope, Jimmy Demaret, winner of the 1952 Crosby tournament, and several "oldtimers" from the venerable golf championship are scheduled to play an exhibition match Wednesday at Pebble Beach.

The match is scheduled to start at 9:30 a.m., said Ted Durein, of Carmel, press director for the 37th annual Crosby Pro-Am. The tournament starts Thursday and the final round of play is scheduled for Sunday.

"What I am really thrilled with is the appearance of the old pros my father started this tournament for," said Nathaniel Crosby, Crosby's 16-year-old son and sponsor of the tournament since his father's death in October. "I think the galleries will love them. The public should really like to see these legendary figures play golf once again."

The purse for this year's tournament totals $225,000. On Sunday, the 30 low-scoring teams and the 60 professionals with the lowest scores will play for the money at Pebble Beach.

Crosby started the tournament in 1937 at the Rancho Santa Fe Golf Course, near San Diego, according to Durein. The first purse was $2,500. The tourney was suspended in 1942 during World War II.

Carmel swimmer wins pair of 100-yard races

Kathy Walthour, a 1977 graduate from Carmel High School, now a freshman at William Woods College in Fulton, Mo., swept two first-place awards at an intercollegiate swim meet in December.

Miss Walthour placed first in the 100-yard freestyle and the 100-yard individual medley against the University of Missouri-St. Louis. The final score was 79-44.

She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Walthour, of Carmel.

you tie up your boat. There is a certain love of boats a yachtsman has and he tries to instill that in other people," Kilpatrick said.

Not all of his time is spent on the Merlin in quest of victory. Besides his insurance agency work, Kilpatrick is an advisor in the sailing program at Robert Louis Stevenson School in Pebble Beach, and he teaches sailing to youngsters during the summer Monterey Junior program, an eight-week low-cost session sponsored by the Monterey Yacht Club.

He is what might be called an evangelist for sailing. Kilpatrick shows sailing movies to service clubs and civic groups, has helped get donated boats for the Stevenson School program and organizes race events for the students as well as getting together crewmen with Lee for the Merlin.

"You know," Kilpatrick said, leaning back on his chair, "I have talked, just this week, to Hawaii, New York, Annapolis, Texas, San Diego, San Francisco and Newport on sailing stuff — getting races set for RLS, talking about boats, getting ready for the Baja race. And I love it."

CARMEL FIRE Chief Robert A. Updike (center) receives a $200 check from Fred Stanley, past president of the Carmel Rotary Club, to defray costs of buying the "Jaws of Life" rescue tool. At the right is Howard Sehlin, current president of the Rotary Club. The club was among some 48 donors.

'Jaws' donations exceed $3,000, Updike reports

Donations from 48 firms, civic groups and individuals have replenished the Carmel Fire Department equipment fund used to buy the "jaws of Life" rescue pry tool.

More than $3,000 was given since early December, when Carmel bought the hydraulic device with an assist from the Pacific Grove Fire Department. In Pacific Grove, a "Jaws of Life" fundraising drive was so successful the department there offered Carmel $3,000 of its excess proceeds. The tool costs $6,000 and is due for delivery in Carmel before February.

A $500 donation from the Independent Insurance Agents of Monterey pushed the amount collected over $3,000. The pledge was made earlier this week.

"It is only with the help of citizens that we are able to provide the service to our neighbors that is so vital," said Robert A. Updike, the Carmel fire chief, in a letter to the donors. "The tool has been ordered and our personnel is being trained in its use."

Donors being thanked by the department include:

Francis H. Jacoby, Carmel; Clyde Herr, Clam Box Restaurant, Carmel; Merle Strauch, Wine Cellar Restaurant, Carmel; Robert E. Murphy, Carmel; Mike and Virginia Stanton, Normandy Inn, Carmel; Arthur H. Farrell's touch

By the Rev. LARRY FARRELL

The great Hebrew prophet Jeremiah spent 65 years dolefully denouncing politicians and his fellow citizens of high and low degree. As the year ends, we shall forswear this enjoyable luxury and count our blessings instead. Thank you, Lord, for a miracle!

To the world's amazement, two unlikely doves flew out of the Middle East, Menahem Begin and Anwar Sadat, bearing tidings of comfort and joy. O Lord, continue to hold your loving hands over their deliberations so that their task may be completed. The last spontaneous act of our President was on his inauguration day, when he walked down Pennsylvania Avenue, but despite mediocre advisors and a moribund Congress, we are at "peace." This is no mean gift, O Lord, and for this "de facto" peace we give thee thanks!

When we are tempted to break forth in a "Jeremiad," may we reflect that all authority comes from thee, O Lord, and that it flows through the people. When we are inclined to complain bitterly about our leaders, let us indulge instead in self-scrutiny and action. As my old friend Admiral Bob Bradley, of Dublin, Ga., used to say, "Shoot Luke or put the musket down." No doubt some of you can express this thought in more earthy terms.

Monk to discuss East and West

"Encounters between the East and West" will be the topic of a talk by Brother David Steindl-Rast on Monday at 8 p.m. in the gallery of the Cherry Foundation, Fourth and Guadalupe, in Carmel.

Brother David is a monk from the Benedictine Grange in West Redding, Conn. He comes to Carmel following a lecture tour in Japan. The talk is open to the public.

Proposed Marriott lodge

Excerpts from EIR

CERTIFICATION of the Rancho Canada Marriott Lodge environmental impact report was heard at the Board of Supervisors' meeting of Oct. 4, 1977. The supervisors directed staff to prepare additional information concerning impacts on groundwater resources, sewage treatment alternatives, employment and the economics of low- and moderate-cost housing.

GROUNDWATER RESOURCES WATER SUPPLY IN THE CARMEL VALLEY

The principal source of groundwater for the Monterey Peninsula is now, and will be in the foreseeable future, the Carmel Valley alluvium. In addition, the Peninsula's entire supply of surface water is taken from the Carmel River by way of the San Clemente and Los Padres dams. Carmel Valley's groundwater supplies are based on the following two factors: the volume of alluvium and the aquifer's recharge capabilities.

Available Storage Capacity

THE CALIFORNIA State Water Resources Department Zone 11 Investigation of 1974 concludes that the total alluvial volume in Carmel Valley is 317,855 acre-feet, and that a sustained annual yield of 15,000 acre-feet of water can be obtained if the water table is lowered "an additional 10 feet" throughout the Valley. This information was recently updated by the Department of Water Resources.

Robert Greenwood's (registered geologist) study indicates that the total volume of alluvium is 248,551 acre-feet, considerably less than the 317,855 acre-feet of the Zone 11 study. Greenwood estimates the available water storage as 23,242 acre-feet.

When referring to "available water," it must be emphasized that the calculated figures are maxima, based on taking all the water out. In practice, that is not technically possible, even if it were environmentally permissible.

We can perhaps consider 10,000 to 12,000 acre-feet of extraction as technically feasible, provided: the aquifer is full to begin with, which is not so in drought years, and natural inflow will compensate for the withdrawal — again, not assured in drought years.

It is probable that even with additional well fields throughout the Valley, yields of 15,000 acre-feet can be obtained only in years of normal or excess rainfall.

Only 19 per cent of the alluvium lies within Cal-Am's Mid-Valley well field; 57.2 per cent of it lies further downstream, and 23.8 per cent further upstream. However, these percentages do not reflect the distribution of available groundwater, because most of the water downstream from Meadows Road is below the sea level gradient, and cannot be safely extracted without risk of saltwater intrusion.

However, it should be noted that it is technically possible to utilize a portion

Two sewage ideas

SEWAGE TREATMENT ALTERNATIVES
(From Culp-Wesner-Culp, consultants for Rancho Canada Marriott Lodge)

THE ENVIRONMENTAL impact report for the Rancho Canada Marriott Lodge discussed two alternatives for treatment and disposal of sewage. The following discussion applies to alternative two, in which the effluent is treated and blended with the raw water supply and used for golf course irrigation. There will be approximately 62,870 gallons per day (gpd) to treat.

The state of California requires that effluent used for irrigation of golf courses be oxidized, with a median coliform bacteria not to exceed an mpn of 23/100 ml.

There has been some concern with the relatively shallow groundwater table located below the golf course. Chances of pathogenic bacteria contamination or trace organic concentration increases are very remote.

The remaining concern is nitrate concentration increase in the aquifer. However, the effluent is diluted by approximately 10:1 by raw water. Therefore, a nitrogen content of 20 to 25 ppm is reduced to 2.0 to 2.5 ppm, the latter values being well below critical levels.

The treatment process train would consist of a flow equalization basin (aerated and mixed), an extended aeration activated sludge process, filtration through granular media and chlorination. The extended aeration process will produce a relatively stable sludge, thus eliminating the need for expensive sludge-processing equipment.

The sludge produced could be used as a soil conditioner. This would be extremely valuable in growing replacement sod for the golf course.

The extended aeration process includes an aeration basin and clarifier with sludge return and wasting facilities. Filtration is provided to insure adequate solids removal thus minimizing sprinkler clogging. Chlorination is provided to reduce pathogenic bacteria to meet public health standards.

Following chlorination the effluent would be piped to a tank or basin for blending with well water and then on to the irrigation system.

WASTEWATER DISPOSAL THROUGH IRRIGATION OF OFF-SITE AREAS
(From Culp-Wesner-Culp, consultants for Rancho Canada Marriott Lodge)

An alternative to irrigating the Rancho Canada Golf Course is to export treated effluent to irrigate a golf course where groundwater quality is not a concern.

The treatment process train would consist of a flow equalization basin (aerated and mixed), an extended aeration activated sludge process, filtration through granular media and chlorination. The extended aeration process will produce a relatively stable sludge, thus eliminating the need for expensive sludge-processing equipment.

The sludge produced could be used as a soil conditioner. This would be extremely valuable in growing replacement sod for the golf course. The extended aeration process includes an aeration basin and clarifier with sludge return and wasting facilities. Filtration is provided to insure adequate solids removal thus minimizing sprinkler clogging. Chlorination is provided to reduce pathogenic bacteria to meet public health standards.

Following chlorination, the effluent would be piped to a tank or basin for storage and then pumped into a transfer truck for ultimate disposal.

Saltwater threat

of the water below sea level gradient, provided that a system of artificial recharge is installed near Highway 1 as a barrier against saltwater intrusion, with provision for regular monitoring. The quantity of water thus obtainable will depend on the recharge system and provision for irrigation of vegetation throughout the lower Valley.

It appears that, when the aquifer is fully charged, Cal-Am's Mid-Valley well field contains 30.5 per cent of the available water, approximately 7,093 acre-feet. Another possible 7,660 acre-feet accumulate in the upstream basins.

The largest reservoir of available water appears to be the 8,489 acre-feet lying above the sea level gradient between Meadows Road and Highway 1. However, the water quality in this area is poor due to the high mineral content.

Recharge

THE AQUIFER is substantially depleted during a sequence of dry years due to the aquifer's limited storage capacity. It is unlikely that yields in the 10,000 acre-feet range could be consistently maintained, although it is precisely during such dry periods that the Peninsula will make its greatest demands upon the aquifer.

Preliminary information from Monterey County Flood Control and Water Conservation District indicates that groundwater levels in the Carmel Valley have dropped an average of 14.6 feet over the two-year drought between 1975 and 1977.

Wells in the lower portion of the Valley (west of Highway 1, east to Via Mallorca near Hacienda Carmel) have shown an average drop of approximately six feet over this same two-year period (data are on file with the County Planning Department). In normal years, the water table in the Valley alluvium fluctuates about five feet between wet and dry seasons. The six-foot drop in the lower portion of the Valley would thus represent an insignificant drop in the groundwater table.

Environmental Effects of Groundwater Usage

IF WELL fields were to be distributed equitably throughout the Valley, and if winter rains always recharged the aquifer, projected demands for water might be met with little environmental damage other than loss of surface flows in the Carmel River. In fact, neither of these two conditions is met.

Under natural conditions, when the population was small, the Valley floor and river banks have supported a growth of willows, sycamores and other vegetation which provided a habitat for wildlife, and helped to retard erosion of the river banks during floods.

The drawdown of the water table around operating wells (cone of depression) is damaging to trees and shrubs which depend upon groundwater through the dry season. The situation is particularly serious during drought years such as 1975-76-77.

One of the Cal-Am wells in Mid-Valley has reduced the water level to 60 feet below the surface (March 1977), and the average level in Mid-Valley observation wells is 43.5 feet below the surface. Damage to riparian vegetation has been documented over the years by Edwin Lee and others; extensive evidence of damage was presented at the PUC hearings in Case 9530 in December 1976.

Plans for additional production by Cal-Am rely entirely upon pumping from the Carmel Valley aquifer. A total production by all users is envisaged to be about 14,000 acre-feet, as opposed to 5,500 acre-feet averaged over the past 10 years. Any such massive increase will widen and intensify the damage to the natural environment of the Valley floor.

Additional environmental damage may be caused as we restrict the normal flow of groundwater to the ocean. Such water is not "wasted"; it maintains the estuarine and lagoonal communities near the river's mouth, and is probably essential to the complex fauna of the Carmel Bay, designated by the State as an Area of Special Biological Importance (ASBS).

The Rancho Canada Golf Course currently withdraws 550,000 gallons of water per day from the aquifer in Carmel Valley for irrigation purposes. The proposed hotel projects' water needs will be 54,186 gallons per day less than the water currently used for irrigation. This amounts to a savings of approximately 61 acre-feet a year.

REAL ESTATE

Spanish Hacienda in Carmel Valley

You almost expect Don Alfredo or Don Miguel or Don Somebody to greet you as you step through the great wooden gates into the patio that protects this desert-style home. And that's not so far-fetched, because it sits within a few feet of the original ranch-house which served as command post for the 4300-acre Rancho Canada de la Segundo a hundred years or so ago.

When Architect Paul Davis designed this house about 8 years ago, he carefully blended the traditions of the past with the conveniences of today. It's all adobe. 15" x 6" bricks exposed inside and out. The flat roof is supported by 6 x 12 beams, crossed by smaller beams and sheathed in with 4" planks. The house is U-shaped, fronted by a 19 x 19 living room that faces, but is hidden from, Carmel Valley Road, and flanked by two wings which reach back toward a knoll and embrace a 24 x 26 paved inner patio.

In the photo below you see the living room, dominated by a giant adobe fireplace with fir-beam mantel. On either side floor-to-ceiling windows look to the private front patio; and behind you, glass doors open to the inner court. The massive inset carpet is flame-colored, and the floor around it is paved with 6" square earthen tile — as is the rest of the house.

The east wing contains an open, skylighted kitchen with sizeable dining area, laundry room, 2 bedrooms and a bath, all separated from the courtyard by a vertical corridor. The west wing is almost identical, with 2 bedrooms, sky-lighted master bath and dressing room, and numerous closets. Along its corridor a lighted shadow-box displays artifacts from the past: a horseshoe, hand-wrought nails and bolts, buckles, an old medicine bottle.

A home like this deserves a name, and you'll find it lettered on the gatepost: Casa Canada. It's just 3 miles east of Highway 1, on Carmel Valley Road directly across from the stables. It also has a number, 674, and you must look sharp for it. The short lane leads to the one-acre site, parking area, spacious carport, and a wonderfully modern 1800 sq. ft. house with a romantic tradition. The price is $142,500.

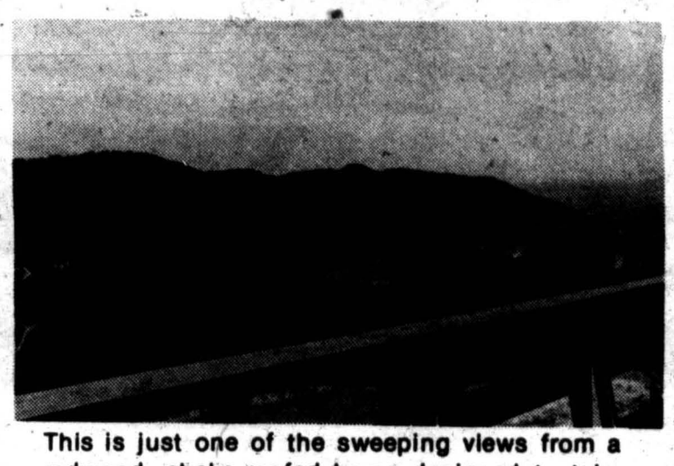
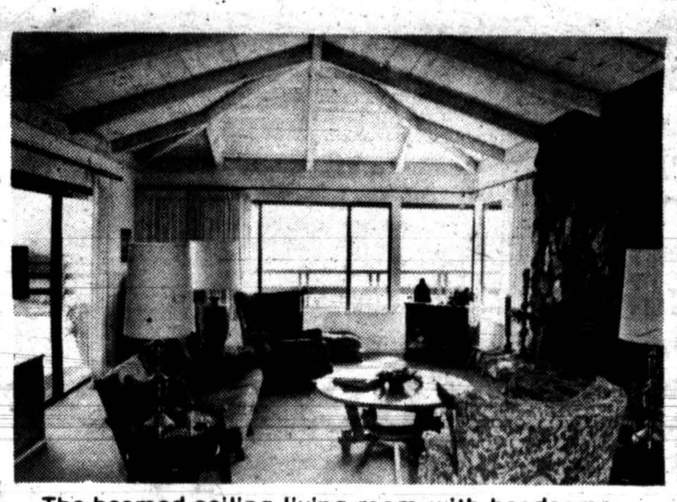
Lines from Lois Atop a Sunny Knoll in Carmel Valley

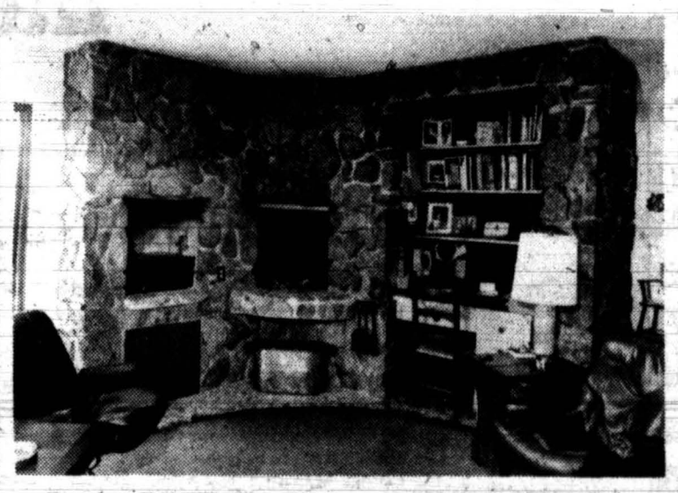


This is just one of the sweeping views from a redwood, shake-roofed home designed to take full advantage of its two and a half acre meadowland site enhanced by oaks, natural landscaping and an intriguing gopher-free vegetable garden.

Outdoor enjoyment centers about the pool, surrounding terrace and adjacent deck, all correlated to the interior by sliding glass doors and wide window walls.



The beamed ceiling living room with handsome, raised hearth granite fireplace opens off the tiled entry as do, too, the dining room and spacious master bedroom suite.



The family room has both barbecue and fireplace as well as a redwood paneled bar and is separated by a counter (seats five) from the efficient kitchen with a big pantry. Also in this well-planned home are a study (fourth bedroom), studio, laundry/sewing room and a workshop in the double garage. Price: $247,500.

News rack curbs mulled

Brehmer.

THE POSSIBILITY of having 50 newspaper racks in a single block is valid reason for the city to control their location," said Collins at the Business License Review Board meeting.

The board decided it will contact all news rack distributors in the area to determine the number and location of racks in Carmel.

The board will meet again today and may vote to recommend to the City Council that the Business License Review Board control the location and licensing of all newspaper and magazine vending racks in the city.

Would the city try and control the types of newspapers distributed in the racks?

Councilman Mike Brown asked about controls on certain "less desirable" newspapers at last Tuesday's City Council meeting.

Collins warned Brown that the city might then be infringing on Constitutional rights.

"We'd be in big, fat trouble trying to regulate which papers are available here," Collins said.

LOCAL CLASS SHOWS HOW TO RELAX AND FEEL YOUNGER

The world's most ancient system for physical and mental fitness proposes that age has little to do with how many years ago you were born. Rather it depends upon how many of the "characteristics" of age you possess. A person can be "old," stiff and out of shape at 30, and can be youthfully vital and flexible at 70.

What are some of these characteristics? Let us compare the 6 major areas:

YOUTH	AGE
1. Flexibility — suppleness — agility; grace — poise — balance.	1. Stiffness — tightness — immobility — awkwardness — lack of poise.
2. Ability to relax as necessary — calmness — composure — serenity; restful sleep.	2. Tension — nervousness — irritability — poor disposition; insomnia.
3. Vitality — energy — endurance.	3. Fatigue — weariness — exhaustion.
4. Proper blood circulation resulting in the health and strength of vital organs and glands.	4. Inadequate blood circulation with resultant dull complexion, wrinkles; general poor health.
5. Resilience of muscles resulting in firmness, taut skin, strength.	5. Loss of muscle tone resulting in weakness, sagging and flabbiness.
6. Normal weight (in accordance with bone structure) and ability to control and correctly distribute weight.	6. Obesity, inability to control and maintain correct weight.

The Yoga For Health program is a system of slow motion body stretches, breathing exercises and relaxation techniques that comprise an ideal plan for achieving physical and mental fitness. Its practice results in removal of excess fatty tissue, better muscle tone; increased flexibility and vitality, relief from tension, and deep relaxation of body and mind.

Tale pinned to donkey

A Carmel man pinned a tale to his neighbor's donkey last week and now the donkey must go.

Fred Askew, of Torres and Second, told police he did not approve of the donkey in his neighbor's yard.

Under Carmel animal control law, anyone wishing to have a grazing animal of any sort must receive the consent of all residents within 50 feet of the pasture area.

The donkey's owner, Nancy Roberts, of Third and Torres, has agreed to find a new home for her pet.

End water rationing, managing agency told

MANDATORY WATER rationing on the Monterey Peninsula should be ended, the Peninsula Water Management Agency was told Monday by the Zone 11 Water Advisory Committee.

"There is no reason they shouldn't return to Phase Zero," Edwin Lee, a member of the committee, said after the meeting. Household water users supplied by California-American Water Co. have been restricted to 50 gallons per day, the Phase Two level, since Feb. 18, 1977. The Zone 11 committee did not suggest that restrictions be lifted on commercial users. The latter were told to cut back from 15 to 35 per cent based on consumption figures from 1976.

'There is no reason not to return to Phase Zero.'

If approved by the management agency, the return to Phase Zero would remove mandatory rationing and the fines that could be imposed on violators.

Harold J. Boudreau, administrator of the Water Management Agency, said that he would prefer not to abandon the rationing program altogether until it is clear that the Peninsula could get through the summer without a return to rationing. He stated that he would recommend a move to Phase Two at the Jan. 25 meeting of the agency. Under Phase Two rationing, residential users would be allowed 63 gallons per person per day.

The pumping capacity at Cal-Am wells, 14 of which are in Carmel Valley, has returned to the 34.4-acre-foot-a-day level, Richard Sullivan, vice president and general manager of the water company, said at the meeting. The State Public Utilities Commission ordered rationing on the Peninsula in February, but it said if the pumping capacity rose to the 34.4-acre-foot level, mandatory rationing could be lifted, Lee explained Tuesday.

SULLIVAN ALSO told the advisory committee that Cal-Am was negotiating to sink four new wells on private property in the Lower Valley area. He indicated the firm also might seek to build an iron removal plant there to purify water pumped from the new wells.

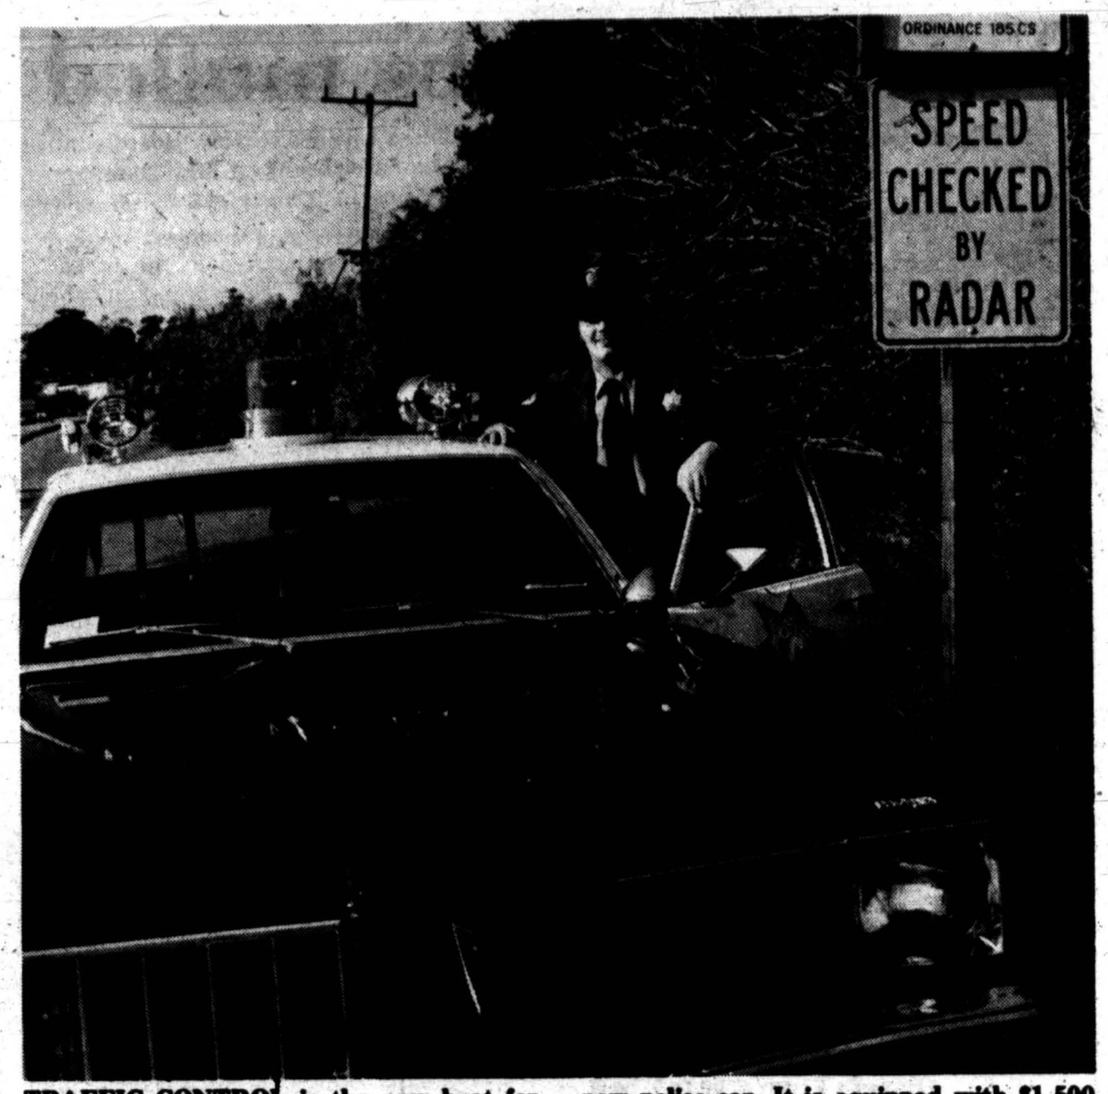
In response to a question from the board about how much of the water supplied would be for drought relief and how much to supply new customers, Sullivan said that he could not say. The number of new customers presumably will increase when the Canada de Segunda pipeline is completed and the present moratorium on new water hookups is lifted.

In a report issued Dec. 19, the State Water Resources Department said new wells would be needed if the drought continued. Carl Stetson, district manager for the department, also said the Carmel River aquifer could be recharged with a "couple" months of normal rainfall.

John Williams, of the Zone 11 board, pointed out Tuesday that the aquifer is recharged by the flow in the Carmel River, not by the rainfall alone. The aquifer could be recharged in two months of normal flow in the river.

Records from the Los Padres Dam, at the headwaters of the Carmel River, showed more water was spilled into the river in December, when heavy rain began here, than in any December since 1973, the wettest of the last five years.

Williams stated that a report from the Monterey Flood Control District, which monitors wells in the Valley, showed a rise in the water level of 4.9 feet since October. The level rose 1.5 feet in the first week of January.



TRAFFIC CONTROL is the new beat for Carmel Police Officer Terry Lacoma. The officer has been assigned to the special enforcement project with the use of a state grant. Part of the grant was used to buy a new police car. It is equipped with $1,500 worth of radar equipment. Lacoma is pictured along a stretch of Rio Road where he will enforce the 30 m.p.h. speed limit. (Del Kaller photo)

New officer hired

Carmel gets state help on traffic problems

A 27-year-old Carmel police officer was assigned full time Sunday to traffic law enforcement on the city streets. The redoubled effort to improve traffic flow is underwritten by a $40,174 grant from the state.

"We received the grant for several reasons," said Police Captain Bob Fischer. He cited statistics that showed an average of 40,000 cars pass through Carmel daily.

"Besides that," he said, "we have the ninth highest number of traffic accidents and injuries of the 72 cities in the state of similar size."

The traffic officer, Terry Lacoma, joined the department four years ago and has worked as a patrolman for two years. The state grant, given by the Office of Traffic Safety in 1977, pays the officer's salary for 1978 and half of it in 1979, Fischer said.

Part of the grant was used to purchase a radar-equipped 1978 Pontiac police car. The unit cost a total of $6,700.

Fischer said Lacoma will conduct investigations of traffic mishaps and studies of the major causes of local accidents. He remains a sworn officer able to intervene in crimes or aid other officers, Fischer added.

The traffic law enforcement program coincides with the addition of 56 new stop signs in Carmel, said Fisher. In September, the Carmel City Council took action leading to a shared-cost purchase of the signs with the State Department of Transportation.

Fischer said all of the new signs, which bring the number in Carmel to 208, should be installed within four weeks.

He said Lacoma's transfer reduced the ranks of patrolmen from nine to eight. An additional officer will be hired to replace the new traffic officer, Fischer said.

Featherstone photos on exhibit

Photographs by David Featherstone, of Carmel, will be on display at the Dibert Gallery, upstairs at the Doud Arcade at Ocean and San Carlos, through Feb. 7. The show opened Saturday.

Featherstone, 32, is the executive assistant director of the Friends of Photography. He also is a contributing editor to Artweek, where he writes exhibit reviews.

The gallery is open daily, except on Sunday and Wednesday, from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Display of French paintings opens at Zantman Galleries

An exhibit of new paintings by French artists Michel de Gallard and Olivier Foss opened at Zantman Art Galleries, Mission and Sixth, Carmel, on Saturday.

Born in France in 1921, de Gallard grew up in a religious institution with a relentless discipline, which may have contributed to his subsequent craving for outdoor life, open space and freedom.

As a child, he spent his vacations with his grandfather, a famous surgeon and distinguished scholar. Together they spent each vacation with a box of watercolors, brushes and an endless store of poetry, rambling happily through the countryside.

De Gallard always wanted to be a painter, although pressure from his family made him agree to start medical studies. During his first year he showed such talent in anatomical sketches that his biology professor could not help remarking that it would be wiser for him to prepare for the Beaux Arts entry examination.

He spent the war years in a camp for youths, then went to art school in 1946 and 1947. While he was studying in Paris, the two artists he admired most were Gruber and Utrillo. He learned from both but found his own style and, with Bernard Buffet, Andre Minaux and Couty, joined the group of the great French artist Lorjou. Soon his paintings were accepted in many exhibits in the various "salons," and in 1956 he was given his first one-man show in Paris.

His success grew steadily, but still craving the outdoor life, he did not want to stay in Paris. He found his home far out in the country near a tiny village. He has converted his ancient barn into an immense studio on the peak of a hill. There he works, interrupted by long walks, hunting, reading, listening to music and taking an occasional trip to Paris with his wife to go to the theater and visit art galleries and museums.

Since 1956 he has had many one-man shows in Paris and several other cities in France, in Canada, England, South Africa, Japan and the United States, where he is represented exclusively by Zantman Art Galleries.

Six one-day boat outings scheduled for whale watchers

The California gray whales will be the focus of six one-day boat trips on Monterey Bay this winter sponsored by Nature Expeditions International. The trips are scheduled to take place Saturdays and Sundays from January 14 to January 29, and will be led by naturalists.

Trip participants will be able to observe the whales' behavior and photograph them at close range during a period when up to 200 whales a day are usually passing through Monterey Bay on their way to the lagoons of Baja California.

Near shore, sea otters and sea lions can be seen, while offshore many species of resident and migratory sea birds, porpoises and other wildlife can be identified.

Among the trip leaders will be Glenn Moffat, biology professor at Foothill College; Doug Cheeseman, biology professor at De Anza College; and Paul Kelly, research biologist at UC Irvine.

The trip cost is $22 per person and includes educational material about the gray whale, marine birds of Monterey Bay and other marine mammals commonly seen in the area.

For reservations or information, write Nature Expeditions International, 599 College Avenue, Palo Alto 94306, or phone (415) 328-6572.

ORDINANCE NO. 77-33

AN ORDINANCE AMENDING THE PLANNING AND ZONING CODE (PART X) OF THE MUNICIPAL CODE OF THE CITY OF CARMEL-BY-THE-SEA AS PERTAINS TO USE PERMITS FOR FOOD SERVICE ESTABLISHMENTS

THE CITY COUNCIL OF THE CITY OF CARMEL-BY-THE-SEA DOES ORDAIN as follows:

Section 1. That Part X, Division 4, Article 2 of the Municipal Code be amended by the addition of Section 1342.32 to read as follows:

1342.32 FINDINGS REQUIRED FOR FOOD SERVICE ESTABLISHMENTS

In addition to the findings required by Section 1342.3, the Board of Adjustments shall further find when granting a use permit for food service establishments the following:

(A.) When a New Business is Established:

(1.) That there is an adequate area on the site for the storage of trash and garbage and so designed that such area can be cleaned, and the refuse removed without creating a public nuisance on the sidewalks or other public ways.

(2.) That food sold for consumption off the premises shall be placed in covered containers.

(3.) That there are restrooms for both sexes within the business premises.

(4.) That the food service establishment is not classified as a drive-in restaurant, a formula restaurant, or a take-out food restaurant.

(5.) That a maximum seating capacity has been set by the Building Inspector for this occupancy.

(6.) That in addition to the findings above, the Board of Adjustments must find when a food service establishment proposes to sell alcoholic beverages:

(a.) That such beverages are to be prepared at a non-public service bar as defined within this Code.

(b.) That substantially all foods from the standard menu will be available for purchase during the hours that alcoholic beverages are being served except for the first hour and the last hour of each business day.

(c.) That the restaurant is designed in such a manner as not to create a separate area which could be considered a cocktail lounge, bar room, or other facility room primarily for the consumption of alcoholic beverages.

(d.) That the applications, menu and plans indicate that the business will be primarily for a food service establishment and that such alcoholic beverages are proposed to be served only at standard height dining tables within the business premises.

(B). When an Existing Business is Changing Ownership or Modifying its Operation:

(1.) If the food service establishment is considered a legal non-conforming business, the reasons for non-conformity shall be stated in the findings.

(2.) The plans submitted with the application indicate that the non-conformity will not be increased by the issuance of the permit.

(3.) The existing business is primarily a food service establishment and any sale of alcoholic beverages will be subordinate to the primary business.

(C.) This Section shall in no way limit the power of the Board of Adjustments to impose additional conditions as provided in Section 1342.4 of this Code. The conditions suggested by the findings for use permits for new businesses may be applied to use permits for existing businesses changing ownership or modifying operations if in keeping with Section 1342.4 of this Code.

Section 2. If any section, subsection or part of a sub-section of this ordinance is held to be invalid or unenforceable, all other sections, sub-sections or parts of sub-sections of this ordinance shall remain valid and enforceable.

Section 3. Effective Date. This ordinance shall become effective thirty (30) days after its final passage and adoption.

Woody Allen play at the Studio pleases laugh-weary audience

By BARBARA MOUNTREY

SO HOW does a nice Greek boy from California play a caterer from Newark, N.J.? Brilliantly, that's how, in the Studio Theatre production of Woody Allen's Don't Drink the Water. Sam Karas is perfect for the part of Walter Hollander, trapped in a U.S. embassy somewhere behind the Iron Curtain because he took pictures of some missiles.

And Edie Karas, as Walter's wife, Marian, is of course the perfect foil for him, her genuine affection showing through all the insults. Both handle their roles with a naturalness that makes them completely believable even in the midst of farce. No wonder the program calls them "the Sid Caesar and Imogene Coca of the Monterey Peninsula."

As their daughter, Susan, Judy Jorn is bright and cheerful, with a trace of impishness that makes her attraction to Axel Magee seem a reasonable part of her character.

Greg Niebel does a fine job as the hapless Axel, maintaining an air of desperation without ever letting it rise to the level of hysteria. Like most of the parts that are Woody Allen's vision of himself, he's really a sympathetic character, this failure who's been kicked out of a whole continent and hanged in effigy — by his own embassy — as a result of his continual bumbling. We're with him all the way; we want as badly as he does for him to run the embassy better than the oily little civil servant Kilroy (Rudy Rafanelli), hatch an escape plot for the Hollanders, foil Krojack, the slinking secret police officer (Keith Cornell), and of course win the girl.

To no one's surprise, he does so — but not without a series of totally zany adventures involving a cast of characters only Woody Allen could have invented.

THE FIRST of these we meet is Father Drobney, the priest who has been living in the embassy for six years, practicing magic tricks in his bedroom. Allen Yates plays him with a slight touch of madness, and a beguiling wistfulness. It's as sad as it is riotously funny when the rabbit that should have appeared in his magic trick shows up in the hands of the chef, while Kilroy is trying to convince Walter that it will really taste just like chicken, and Walter is insulting the chef, and Marian is trying to invade the kitchen — and that's just one of the moments that kept the audience roaring all night. Tracy Rich, as the oh-so-Gallic chef, sets off peals of laughter with every toss of his head.

So infectious is the buoyant mood of the whole play that even the characters who don't do or say anything funny are funny. These were played by Bill Bumar, as both Ambassador Magee and the arrogant Sultan of Bashir; Jim Jensen, as a diplomat with a nice little parody of an oenophile; and Julie Zaiser, as both the Sultan's wife and the Countess Bordoni, her exotic beauty unfortunately hidden by a veil in the former part.

The fairly elaborate set, designed by Alfredo Valdez, makes maximum use of the stage, suggesting an upstairs, a kitchen, an office and the square outside, where thousands of Communists are rioting (sometimes a little too loudly — the single tiny flaw in the production). The lighting, by Alexei Lopukhin, works smoothly, including the flare when the bomb explodes. Since there are no set changes, the scenes move smoothly into one another. The audience has just time enough to recover from one outrageous climax when the crescendo starts all over.

Credit for the overall pacing of the show must go to the director, Bill Asp. Timing is vital to comedy, and in this production the sense of timing is unerring. There's no letdown at any point; the evening is a solid delight.

Don't Drink the Water plays Friday, Saturday and Sunday evenings through Feb. 29.

Sunset Views:

Award-winning pianist joins San Jose Youth Symphony Saturday

By RICHARD TYLER
Director, Sunset Community and Cultural Center

WHEN I LOOK at the calendar of events planned for 1978, I cannot help but be pleased with the artists and the caliber of performances to be presented at Sunset Theater.

The first major presentation of the year will be the concert of the San Jose Youth Symphony with Jeffrey Swann, winner of the Van Cliburn competition, as soloist. The San Francisco Chamber Orchestra and the Tokyo String Ensemble will perform later this season. There are three Oscar-winning films in the American Theater Film Festival series. The Brown Bag Lunch Cinema has a prized film on Picasso and will be repeating the popular Vivaldi's Venice which proved to be the hit of last year's series. Jose Molina and his Bailes Espanoles will be making a third appearance in the Carmel Festival of Dance. Competitions are in order with the Chamber Music Society, the Carmel Music's Young California Artists again awarding cash and performance prizes.

Then there is the second annual Playwriting Competition offered by the city. We have had calls for information about the Carmel Bach Festival, the Classical Guitar Festival and the Sunday Afternoon Performances at Forest Theater. The Forest Theater Guild is planning a new and exciting season for the summer.

A variety of classes also is available. There will be continuing classes in dance, acting techniques, ballet, exercise, art and adult education. We will again offer a class in the art of bonsai to be taught by Colonel Kenneth B. Burns, well known in the area for his skill and knowledge of bonsai techniques. Seeding, cuttings and nursery collecting will be included in the course as well as a field trip to see Col. Burns's collection of over 400 bonsai at his home in Pacific Grove. A maximum of 15 students will be accepted for this course, for which there is a fee of $15. Classes will meet on Wednesdays at 1 p.m. starting Feb. 8. Please phone 624-3996 to register.

NEXT THURSDAY at 1:30 p.m., the Brown Bag Cinema will present Picasso, His Work, His Life and His Friends. At 90, with 20,000 works of art to his credit, Picasso was the most famous and wealthy artist in history. With special emphasis on the basic themes in his work, this highly entertaining film biography takes us from his early life in Spain to his 90th birthday. We meet the glittering circle of his friends in the Paris of the '20s — Stravinsky, Cocteau, Matisse, Apollinaire, Diaghilev, Gris and Braque. We also see the artist's life revealed in a variety of other styles and media. His distaste for the Spanish Civil War in Guernica — perhaps this century's most famous canvas — his unhappiness in his marriage to ballerina Olga Koklova — translated into brutally distorted figures –and his eroticism.

'The Knack' opens a five-week run

The Knack will open Thursday, Jan. 12, at the Barnyard Theatre, Highway 1 and Rio Rd., Carmel, for a five-week run. The play will be staged Thursday-Saturday evenings at 8:30 p.m. and Sunday afternoons at 2 p.m.

Written by Ann Jellicoe, the play was first produced on Broadway in 1962 by Mike Nichols. The play was also released in the mid-60s as a film starring Rita Tushingham and Michael Crawford. The film was directed by Richard Lester, who also directed the riotous Beatles movies of the same period — Hard Day's Night and Help!

The Barnyard production will be directed by Dan Gotch and will star Alexey Lopukhin as Tolen, the man who has the knack with the ladies. Lopukhin was Ali Hakim in Oklahoma! and Henry in The Fantasticks at the Barnyard.

Others in the cast are Ross Rhodes, Deirdre Moore and Tony Mariano.

An aftershow cabaret of music and songs by many Peninsula performers will be presented after Friday and Saturday evening performances.
